It is related that this quaint story suggested a Washington Irving the tale known as. "Rip Yau Winkle." and which, had he written no sther, would have assuredly fixed his name in the hearts of the people; but, in Hickard's Monthly to November, we find an article written by Ellius Burritte, when would seem, indirectly, however, to Warfadiot this statement, as it emphatically asserts Irving to be the original author of the fanciful ides, to which Jaferson has added such life und popularity.

He took him around it back to the feelings. He took him around it back to the days and walfs of their youth on the Hudson, and touched those memories within him whiten he mind of manhood and of old age holds freshest and dearest, whatever clouds or floods may be made and the set of the plays years between it and the first of life's bright summer. Sleepy Hollow was heir favorite resort—for the people were as intique and odd in their ways and looks as the strange valley itself. In fact, it was the abode of the queerest characters that were ever gathered together in the same space. Such quaint Dutchmen in speech, habits and dress, could coll not loo found elsewhere in the whole country.

short hours of the slumbering household. At every one of them that image, quaint an iodien, showed a now feature under his touch. The June sun, at its earliest rising, looked in through the shutters and saw him where he sat at its hast rays the evening before. When the family were all natir, and breakfast awaited their gathering at the table, he entered the room radiant with the old light of his genius and intellect. He came with his hands full of the sheet's he had wnitten while they were all ast ep. He said it had all came trek to him; Sheepy Hollow had awakened him from his long, dull, dosponding slumber, and then he read the first clumbers of "Hip Van Wunkie," the character that came to him in the "visions of the night."

In the village of Sittendorf, at the foot of a nountain, lived Peter Klaus, a goatherd, whe was in the habit of pasturing his flock upon the Kyffhausen hills Toward evening he enerally let them browse upon a green plo of far off, surrounded with an old ruined wall room which he could take a muster of his bolo flock.

For some days past he had observed that one of his pretirest goats, soon after its arrival at this spot, usually dissuppared, npr joined the fold till late in the evening. He watched her again and sgain, and at last found that she shipped through a gap in the old wall, whither he followed her. It led into a passage which widened as he went into a cavern, and here he saw the goat employed in picking up the oats that fell through some crotices in the place above. He looked up, shook his cars at this o'll shower of corn, but could discover nothing. Where in the earth could it come from? At length he heard over his head the neighing and stamping of hotses, he listened and concluded that the oats must have fallen through the manger when they we fed. The poor goathend was sailly pazzled what to think of the hores in this uninhabited part of the mountain, but so it was, for the groom making his appearance, without saying a word, be koned him to follow him. Peter obeyed, and followed him openess steps, which brought him to an open court yard, surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the sor courty and surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the warrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced the surrounded to the second of the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the surrounded by rocky heights, which only advanced to the surrounded to the sur

He went on, and cance to a snooth shavon green, where he as w twelve ancient kinghts, none of whom spoke a word, engreed at playing nine pina. His guide not beckened to Poter, in silence, to pick up the raine pina, and went his way. Trembling in every joint Peter did not centure to disobey, and at times he cost a stolen glane at the players, whose long heards and abshed doublets were not at all in the present fashion. By degrees his looks grow bolder; he took particular notice of everything around him; among other things, observing a tankard near him filled with wine, whose door was excellent, he took a good draught. It seemed to inspire him with life, and whenever he began to feel tired or running he applied with fresh ardor to the tankard, which always renewed his strength. But, finally, it quite overpowered him, and he fell simple to the exceed his menched to the following the selection of the selection o

Still shaking his head, be went further into the village to look for his own house. He found it, but greatly altered for he worse; a strange goathered, in an old tateed frock, by before the door, and near him his old dog, which growled and showed its teth at Peter when he called him. He went though the entrance, which had once a door, but all within was empty and deserted. Peer staggered out of the house and called for is wife and children by their names. "Where is Valentine Meier, the tailor?"

"Ah!" creed another old uman, leaning upon her crutch, "he has been larg more than these fifteen years in a house hwill never leave."

Peter recognized in thepeakers two of his young neighbors, who soied to have grown old very suddenly, but head no inclination to inquire any further. Athis movement there appeared, making her withrough the crowd of spectators, a sprightly oung woman with a year old baby in her arm and girl about four laking hold of her hand, I three as like his wife he was seeking for . possible.

"What are your name" he inquired in a tone of great surprise. "Ine is Maria." "And to your fathers," continued ete. "Peter Klaus, to be sure. It is now twity years ago since we were all looking for in day and night upon the Kyfflausen; for is flock came home without him, and I as then, 'continued the woman, "only sev years old."

The goalherd could nonger bear this!

"I am Peter Klaus, haid, "Peter and no other," and he took his aughter's child and kiesed it.

"I am Peter Khaus, h said, "Peter and no other," and he took his aughter's child and kissed it.

The spectators appear struck dumb with astonishment, until first se and then another began to say: "Yes, indo, this is Peter Khaus. Welcome, good neighboaffer twenty years' absence; welcome home.

And when frail humanity sinks into the grave, we are too aft to pity in stead of condemning those who have sinned Mrs. Stowe shows us how much better it is Mrs. Stowe shows us how much better it is to pursue and personate the spirit beyond the confines of the grave. Mrs. Stowe has written a book on the subject. We hope it will command a good price. She ought to be paid well for such a literary job. We know of no other American lady who could be induced to go through such an investigation, at any price. What a task to unveil the dead, and to do it not with sad tours, and broken hearts, but to spit upon, tear, and trample the mortal who has passed to his account! Was there ever a has passed to his account? What that pre-sonted by Mrs. Stowe, in assailing the memory of Lord Byron? Suppose her whole churge were true. Did not the whole world know that Byron was no better or worse than his contemporaries of that licen-tions and infidel age? Does not everybody know that hereditary insanity was in his know that hereditary usanty was in helped, who is to be benefitted by ventilating such a tale of depravity? Ecumenical Council held their final section the Cathedral of St. Peter on Saturday sion at the Cathedral of St. Fewr on cause. Efforts had been made to improve the second properties of the hall, but without much su cost. Sessions will be held hereafter at Qu cesi." Sossions will be held hereafter at Que-rinal.

The Oiviler Catalica, published here, has a long article in relation to the different motive of the Ecumenical Council now in session. It states the government generally have neither avored nor hindered the Council except the Russian schism, which prevented the only Bishop of Poland not killed or exiled to Siberia, from being precent to relate the misfortunes o-that martyred country. Only one nation France, has given solicitude in keeping a gar-rison here to protect the tranquility of the Council.

We bare r ar, from Bromes, giving full accomute of the eleven months of this year from the ports of Antworp, Bremen, Humburg and Rotterdam which supply that densely populated portion of Europe, Northern Gormany and Bolgium as well as the more southern State, Austria These accounts are taken from official sources Representing, as they do, the exact condition of the Petroleum trade in a district which at nually consumes considerably more than one half of the entire quantity experted from Ame ries, they will be found interesting. Sub-joined are the quantities taken during the firs-ten months, and during November, 1869, and for the corresponding periods in 1868:

The increase in the total quantity saken from all the ports, this year, was, it will be observed, 100,000 barrels or thirteen per cent, while that during Nagarhay this hile that during November, this year, show an increase of about 22,000 barrels, or about twenty-two per cent. From our files of circu lars we gather that the consumption of during the first eleven months of 1868, in the district for which the above ports are the distributing points, exceeded that for 1867, by twenty-thre er cent. This shows a loss in the aggregat increase in the consumption of ten per cent in 1869 from that of 1868. As the figures are valuable for reference, be append them. bols.

The falling off in the rate of increase, a ere indicated is marked, and it has undoubt ally contributed to bring about recent decline n prices The fact, however, that the con amoption in this great district has increased en per cent. is er cent, is gratifying, particularly o have ruled higher during this than du ing either of the two previous years.

Painful Destitution.

Editors Moraing Heisld.

I wish to enquire through you, whethe there is any provision made by the authorities. that be, for the suffering poor of this city: 1 have found in my walks a mother with five small children without visible means of support, the question, what will they do? They have ery little food, no wood, and no means of pay ing for the sheltering roof which now covers them. A few kind-hearted friends have assisted them thus far through the winter. What dull next be done?

REMARKS ... There is no provision made by the local authorities for the relief of the poor, and such cases as above noticed (which are happily rara) are dependent upon the cosmil ontributions of private individuals. This seems to be a case of peculiar hardship, and we the appeal has heretofore almost wholly sustained the burden of its support Perhap me of our readers may feel promp er in maintaining this "mother with five small children, without visible means of support." Any contributions addressed to this off appropriated to their relief.
